Summary

For the fifth year in a row, Ethos has conducted a study of executive pay at Switzerland's main listed companies. The study covers the companies listed on the SMI and SMIM Indexes on 31 December 2009 (48 companies) and Transocean, which entered the SMI Index in June 2010. The analysis of pay structure and amounts paid is broken down into two groups of companies, those in the financial sector and those in other sectors. It has thus been possible to take account of the financial sector's specific characteristics in terms of pay.

The study is divided into four sections. The first examines remuneration amounts, i.e. the amounts paid to members of the Board of Directors and members of executive management, and changes in those amounts since last year's study.

The second section analyses developments with regard to transparency, not only in the light of the requirements of Swiss company law (the Code of Obligations) but also from the point of view of the SIX Swiss Exchange Directive on Corporate Governance (DCG) and international best practice.

The third section considers pay structure, showing the breakdown of pay into fixed salary, annual bonus and long-term incentive plans, and into cash, shares and options. This section also contains additional information on the proportion of long-term variable remuneration whose final payout depends on the achievement of performance targets. It concludes with an analysis of the length of Board members' employment contracts.

The fourth section outlines the shareholders' rights with regard to executive pay.

Principal results

Remuneration figures

In 2009, the total remuneration of members of the Board of Directors and of executive management in the 49 SMI and SMIM companies reviewed rose by 21% to CHF 1.27 billion. The increase was 73% in the financial sector and only 2% in the other sectors.

For the various categories of persons, average pay and changes since 2008 were as follows:

- Chairman of the Board with no operational functions:
CHF 1'872'495 (-5%)
- Other Board members:
CHF 308'035 (+6%)
- Executive management:
CHF 2'998'424 (+19%)

Remuneration transparency

Shares and/or options are valued using various methods, and it is therefore difficult to compare them without restatement. This confirms the need to introduce more specific rules in the law or in listing rules. On the other hand, there has been a slight improvement in transparency when it comes to annual bonuses. Generally speaking, companies nevertheless remain reluctant to exceed the minimum transparency required by the law.

Pay structure

The variable portion of executive management pay remains very high, especially in the financial sector, where it amounts to over 80% for the SMI companies. Pay structure (fixed amount, bonus, long-term incentive plans) in some cases became more complex following the introduction of long-term plans with performance conditions. However, most of the amounts awarded still do not depend on the future achievement of performance targets.

Say on pay

To date, only 37% of the companies studied (18 companies) submit their remuneration system or report to an advisory vote by the shareholders.

1 Pay Figures

In brief...

- The aggregate remuneration of members of executive management and of the Board increased by 21 % in 2009 compared to 2008. The extent of the increase nevertheless varied widely from one sector to another, rising by 73% in the financial sector but by only 2% in the other sectors.
- In the financial sector, both the members of the Board without operational functions and the members of executive management benefitted from substantial pay increases. Average pay thus returned to pre-crisis levels:

CHF 2 million	(+41%)	for chairmen with no operational functions
CHF 420'000	(+15%)	for other Board members
CHF 8.7 million	(+39%)	for Chairmen/CEO (1 person)
CHF 7 million	(+84%)	for CEO
CHF 4.3 million	(+67%)	for other members of executive management
- In sectors other than finance, average pay remained mostly stable:

CHF 1.81 million	(-16%)	for chairmen with no operational functions
CHF 260'000	(0%)	for other Board members
CHF 15 million	(-3%)	for Chairmen/CEO (1 person)
CHF 4.5 million	(+3%)	for CEO
CHF 2 million	(+1%)	for other members of executive management
- Certain share based awards have substantial leverage. Several people were thus able to make substantial payouts by exercising previous years' grants. For example, Brady Dougan, CEO of Credit Suisse, received CHF 70 million in 2010 from a five-year plan launched in 2004. However, since such amounts do not concern the year under review and the companies rarely communicate amounts paid out ex-post, they have not been included in the Ethos study.

In conclusion...

- In 2009, amid severe downturn, remuneration in the financial sector rose sharply (+73%). In the other sectors it grew by only 2%.
- An analysis of changes in pay over the past five years reveals that the level of pay in 2009 is almost identical to that of 2004. It is nevertheless interesting to note the high volatility of pay in the financial sector. In the other sectors, pay remained stable during the same period.
- Ethos would like to see it become mandatory in Switzerland to publish the current value of past grants and the profits made following exercise of those grants. The picture thus obtained of pay would correspond more closely to reality.

 At the date of publication, only one of the 49 companies under review had not published the 2009 remuneration (Logitech). The data of the previous fiscal year (ended on 31.03.2009) are included in the above figures. In the companies analysed, information is available on 40 CEO and 5 Chairman/CEO (Galenica, GAM Holding, Lindt & Sprüngli, Novartis et Schindler). In the remaining 4 companies, the remuneration of the CEO was either not disclosed (Synthes) or the CEO was not the highest paid member of the executive management (Pargesa, UBS and Valiant).

2 Pay Transparency

In brief...

- Overall, little progress was made with regard to the transparency of remuneration reports in 2009, which remains well below international best practice standards. This is a disappointing observation after three years of application of Articles 663b^{bis} and 663c of the Swiss Code of Obligations relating to the publication of the executive remuneration at Swiss listed companies.
- There was a slight improvement in the description of the annual bonus. However, only 22 of the 49 companies under review disclose the on target bonus as a percentage of base pay. Even fewer (18) publish the maximum bonus in case of overachievement. Virtually no company explains the link between the bonus paid and the performance achieved.
- In Switzerland, it is not mandatory to publish in the annual report the profits made during the year from previous years' grants. Few companies disclose ex-post such information.
- Ethos observes that shares and stock options are valued using various methods. Over half of the companies calculate the value of shares and options at market value at date of grant, while others use the fiscal value, which results in far lower amounts, or choose to recognise the grant value over the entire vesting period. Lastly, some companies restate the value of grants during the plan's lifespan taking into account of the probability that the performance objectives will be met.

In conclusion...

- After careful scrutiny of the remuneration reports, Ethos notes that it is often difficult to establish a link between the description of the remuneration policy and the actual amounts paid such as disclosed by the companies in application of Article 663b^{bis} of the Code of Obligations.
- The wide differences in the amounts published in the various pay studies carried out in Switzerland result from the absence of a standardized method of valuation of shares and stock options grants.
- Ethos calls on the Swiss authorities to impose standard methods of valuation for share based remuneration, in order to ensure consistent figures that can be compared over time and between companies. This step must be taken to allow investors to obtain as accurate a picture as possible of the remuneration policy and amounts paid by Swiss listed companies.

3 Pay Structure

In brief...

Members of the Board of Directors

- The pay structure of members of the Board remained practically unchanged. Cash is the main component, in particular for the chairmen of SMI and SMIM companies (respectively two thirds and 80% of total remuneration).
- In 2009, three companies stopped granting stock options to non-executive Board members, in keeping with best practice. On the other hand, 20 companies (compared to 18 in 2008) paid bonuses to Board members with no operational functions.

Members of executive management

- In the financial sector, variable remuneration, in particular the annual bonus, increased sharply in 2009. Fixed remuneration represents only 17% of the pay of CEOs of SMI financial companies (48% in 2008) and 20% of the pay of other members of executive management (39% in 2008). In SMIM financial companies, fixed remuneration represents 42% of total CEO pay and 56% of that of other members of executive management, whereas the annual bonus accounts for almost the entire variable amount.
- In companies that are not in the financial sector, there has been little change in pay structure in the past few years. The ratio of fixed to variable pay remained almost unchanged in all categories during the 2007-2009 period, despite very fluctuating results, putting into question the principle of pay variability.
- In SMI financial companies, most of the value of incentive plans is subject to performance criteria. This is not the case, however, in companies outside the financial sector, where most long-term incentive awards are only subject to a blocking period at the end of which the awards are definitely released if the person remains employed with the company.
- Eight companies in the group analysed have senior management employment contracts with notice periods exceeding 12 months. Six other companies have such clauses only in case of change of control.

In conclusion...

- The variable part of executive management pay remains very high overall, in particular in the financial sector. The annual bonus rewarding short-term results is the largest component of total remuneration.
- In long-term incentive plans, most of the grants are not subject to performance conditions at vesting, but only to the condition that the person still remains employed by the company at the end of the blocking period. This is not best practice, in particular given the leverage of certain of these plans.

4 Shareholder Rights with Regard to Executive Pay

In brief...

- In all major financial markets except Switzerland, the annual meeting of shareholders has been given, over the years, some rights with regard to executive pay. Depending on the country, this may consist, for example, of having the remuneration report or system put to the vote of the shareholders, or the envelope of the fees paid to the Board of Directors.
- In Switzerland, the Code of Best Practice for Corporate Governance of Economiesuisse recommends companies to give shareholders some say on pay, notably in the form of an advisory vote on the remuneration report.
- In 2009 and 2010, Ethos and eight pension funds* launched two successive "Say on Pay" initiatives that led to the tabling of a resolution demanding an advisory vote on the remuneration report at eight companies. All the companies agreed to voluntarily implement such a vote and the resolutions were therefore withdrawn. In 2010, 37% of the companies under review (18 of the 49 listed on the SMI and SMIM Indexes) ultimately held an advisory vote on the remuneration report or system.

In conclusion...

- Given the limits of self-regulation when it comes to pay, Swiss law must be rapidly changed to give shareholders formal rights with regard to executive remuneration in listed companies.
- In the spring of 2010, on several occasions, a sizeable minority of shareholders did not follow the Board's proposals on remuneration. The vote on the remuneration report or system was often one of the most controversial issues at general meetings, a clear signal for the Board of Directors. In one of these cases, the remuneration report was almost rejected.
- The rate of participation in voting the remuneration report or system has tended to remain relatively low. And yet, for an advisory vote on remuneration to have an impact, shareholders must take action and exercise their voting rights. Generally speaking, institutional investors should systematically vote their shares and publicly disclose their votes.
